

Larry Callahan*Environmental & Hospitality Strategies*

For 30 years, Larry Callahan's strong engineering and development background has created unique results that marry environmental interests and hospitality development. He has been Project Director for the Cousteau Society Educational Facilities and General Project Manager for Post Ranch Inn, The Cousteau Fiji Island Resort and The Lodge at Skylonda. After his successes at Post Ranch Inn, he went on to be Executive Director of Sundance in Utah. At Sundance, he further developed the resort including the ski areas, private homes, organic farm, merchandising, restaurants, art studios, film program and new spa.

Larry is currently Managing Partner of the restoration of El Capitan Canyon near Santa Barbara that integrates an innovative brand model for 'comfort camping.' On all projects, he draws on his myriad resources to oversee operations, permitting, public outreach and marketing to match interested investors with hospitality projects that are both environmentally and business savvy.
